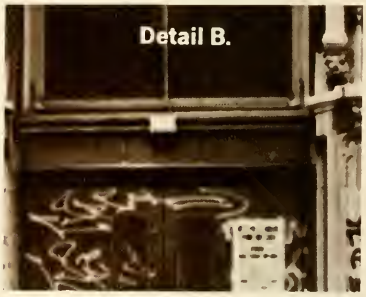
REPORT

THE FINDINGS OF THE COMMITTEE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE EXCAVATION AND INVESTIGATION OF RECENTLY DISCOVERED RUINS OF A TERRAN MEDICAL TRAINING FACILITY

Arch B-2-1

35756

Until recently, medical historians of this millenium had assumed that health maintenance facilities of the area once known as Philadelphia were geographically limited to the central portion of the city. This assumption was based upon the excavations of previous expeditions as outlined in area "A" of the map in figure 1 (facing page). It was not until the extremely fortuitous discovery of glyphs on the facade of an already known bastion of academe (photo. 1, details A&B), that indications of a more extensive medical complex were first brought to the attention of this committee.



Guided and inspired by the aforementioned glyphs, an expedition was IMMEDIATELY formed to re-evaluate that sector of Philadelphia (figure 1, area B) not previously investigated.

To the excavators of site D (see figure 1, area B), it soon became apparent that they had unearthed a find of momentous import. As the work progressed, an increasing number of artifacts were uncovered, allowing the investigators to piece together a fascinating picture of a hitherto unknown school of medicine, differing in philosophy, politics, and economics from those already known.

From student accounts, memoirs, and additional glyphs, it soon became obvious that the philosophic tenets held by the scholars at this site had differed so sharply from contemporaneous medical authorities that the defensive structures known in the artist's reconstruction were thought necessary by the powers of the institution.

FACING PAGE: Artist's reconstruction of the facility at site D, as observed upon excavation. (Detail added in accord with student accounts of the period, unearthed at this site and elsewhere.)

It is interesting to note, however, that no reference to either the institution or its philosophy has as yet been uncovered by researchers in area A.

As additional portions of the structure were unearthed, references were found to a satellite facility on the periphery of the municipal area (figure 1, area C). An exploration of this new site was begun, although limited in scope by lack of funding. To date, no evidence of fortifications has been found there, suggesting vastly improved relations with the other medical authorities of the city at the time of its construction.

ABOVE: The reconstruction work in progress at site D. Restoration based on records found at this site, as well as the ruins unearthed.

ABOVE: Early excavation at the site on the periphery of the municipal area, as mentioned previously. It is interesting to note that only the small structure in the background of the photograph remains standing today. Obviously, the activities occuring in this building were of much greater significance than those in the surrounding structures, and hence the sturdier nature of its construction.

In the interests of clarification, we feel that an explanation of what is to follow in the remainder of this report is in order. In the preceeding pages, we have briefly outlined the events leading to the discovery and partial reconstruction of this previously unknown Terran medical training facility — now known to have been termed PCOM.

In the pages immediately following, we include what we believe is a relatively complete listing of the teaching and political figures of the institution. Following this, we have attempted to reconstruct, from student accounts, the order and scope of training as presented at this institution. This endeavor was simplified by the discovery of the rather complete account of a single, exemplary class — that of the graduating year 1973. Individual members of this class are depicted in the final section of this report. Further, we have allotted additional space for other classes and organizations existing at that time, in order that a clearer picture of the era might be obtained.

Finally, we gratefully acknowledge the generous support of our many sponsors and patrons, whom we have taken the liberty of listing in a small section of the report which follows.

As previously discussed, student memoirs of the era accounted for the majority of historical material upon which this report is based. Utilizing these sources, we present in this section those individuals possessing the highest level of teaching ability.

Much of what we know of this ancient civilization directly resulted from careful study of the numerous glyphs encountered at the excavation. In truth, scarcely a wall could be uncovered that was not decorated with these quaint recordings.

We would, in fact, have had no knowledge of the other men of this institution were it not for this curious custom. We therefore include in this section representative examples of this art form, together with photographic representations of these figures.

SEPTEMBER, 1969

As the first order of business, Mr. Rowland introduced the candidates for class chairman . . .

. . . and we immediately devoted our every waking moment . . .

. . . to the fascinating lectures at hand.

We approached the study of Anatomy with . . .

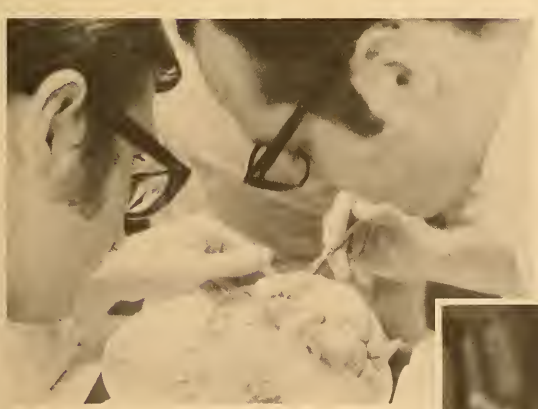
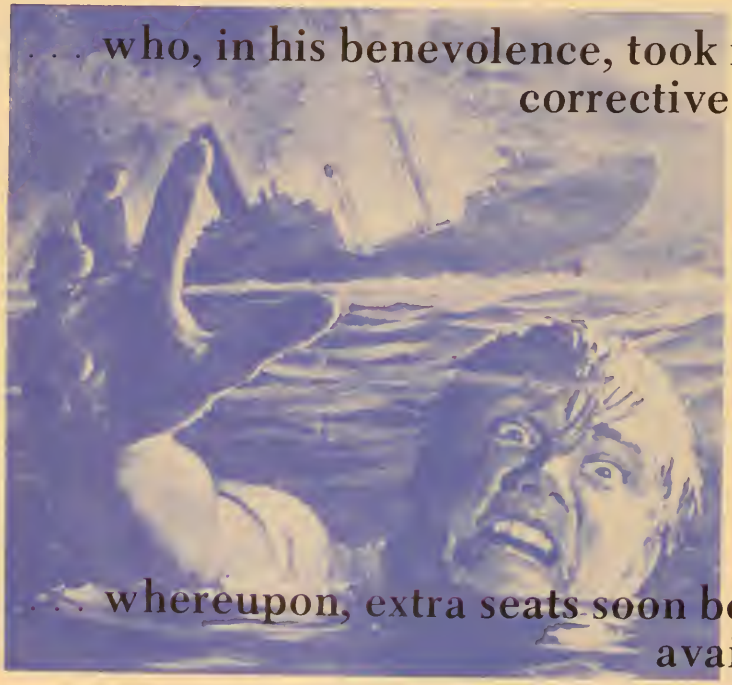
precision . . .



and reverence.

Complaints of overcrowding in the classrooms were brought to the attention of kindly Dr. Kline . . .

. . . who, in his benevolence, took immediate corrective action . . .



. . . whereupon, extra seats soon became available.

As the academic year drew to a close, and final examinations approached, certain difficulties were encountered:

with matters scholastic,

with class moral,

with the system —
the note-taking system.

Reform was imminent.

Imminent . . . and soon apparent.

The Sophomore Year brought the Auditorium Putsch.

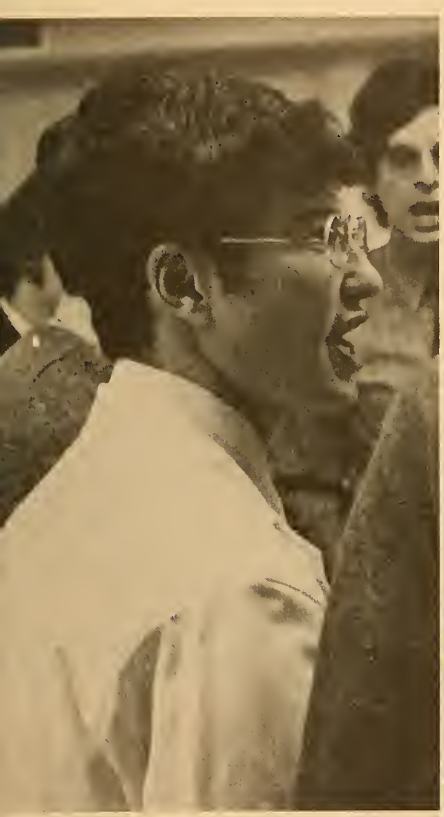
The King emerged.

With the emergence of the King, systems began to function efficiently, but lines of government became . . .

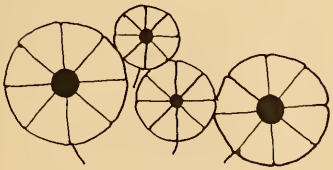
. . . somewhat vague.

Referendum or not, the flow of power was soon made "perfectly clear."

We returned for the Junior year with promises of clinical experience ringing in our ears . . .



. . . welcome back to P.C.O.M.



But the promises were eventually fulfilled.
We began our clinical training . . .

. . . in modern facilities . . .

. . . with the latest in equipment . . .

. . . under the watchful eye . . .

. . . of rural

and urban preceptors.

As our third year drew to a close, and we completed our psychiatric and rehabilitation rotations, we faced the Senior year with anticipation.

BRIEF IDEA OF THE GAME

Each player selects a token (cervical vertebrae are appropriate) and places it on the space marked 'GO'.

You may have noticed that simulated money has not been provided with THE GAME. Unfortunately, only genuine currency may be used. Suitable sources of ready cash include parents, friends, relations, and — on rare occasions — Student Aid. Collect all you can.

Carefully cut out the "Chance" and "Community Chest" cards, and place them — face downward — in the indicated areas on the game board. (The Class Spy may mark the back of the cards.)

Study the game board. The idea of THE GAME is to circle the board and graduate. Your token is advanced according to throw of the dice. Cartain squares are marked — avoid them.

Unmarked squares represent courses and credits — that's why they're unmarked. Upon landing on such a square, the player is faced with several choices: he may (1) pass the course, (2) fail the course, (3) pass the re-exam, (4) fail the re-exam. Actually, it really makes no difference which you choose — that's what makes it a game.

If your token lands on a "Chance" or "Community Chest" square, draw the appropriate card and follow the instructions. (The Class Spy may elect instead to ride the Rowland Railroad.)

Landing on "Faculty Parking" results in immediate expulsion from THE GAME. (All other infractions of the rules tend to be overlooked.)

. . . the timeless in you is aware of life's timelessness,
And knows that yesterday is but today's memory, and tomorrow is today's dream.
But if in your thought you must measure time into seasons,
let each season encircle all the other seasons,
And let today embrace the past with remembrance, and the future with longing.

And if in the twilight of memory we should meet once more, we shall speak again together, and you shall sing to me a deeper song.
And if our hands should meet in another dream, we shall build another tower in the sky.

THE PROPHET
